WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

On the evening of August 6th some thirty friends and relatives met at the spacious home of Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Vashaw in Mayville to congratulate and make merry with them on the twenty-third anniversary of their marriage. The grounds were aglow with electric lights in many colors and the house illuminated and decorated with many beautiful flowers. A most cordial welcome was extended to all. Mr. Vashaw had arrived home recently from the lumber woods above the big lake where he is employed by the Brown Co. and it was a pleasant surprise to him.

Among the out of town guests were: Misses Maude, Florence and Gertrude Green of Berlin, N. H.; Mrs. E. Locke, Claremont, N. H.; Mrs. Luella Morrill, Norway, Me.; and Mrs. Charles Jones and daughter, Miss Rose, also of Norway.

The evening was a very enjoyable one. With Miss Libbie Goodridge at the piano the younger set sang with merry good will. Some especially fine readings were given by Mrs. E. B. Locke and Mrs. Charles Jones and the following original poem by Mrs. Seth Mason was read:

"A CHAT WITH FATHER TIME"

August 6th, 1920

"Father Time" rest from your labors,
You are getting old and grey,
Cease your mowing!

Stars are glowing!

"Ais has been a wedding day

And I want to talk about it,

And out how, in sun or shade,

With what art, or magic laden

"Om did capture that dear maiden

Whom we always knew as "Sadie."

"Seems to me I've heard the story

"That this chap was young and slim,

"Was it so? This bridegroom stately

Sitting there calm and sedately.

Was he ever small and thin?

And this laughing dark-eyed matron

With her jolly jokes and fun;

Was she little, like and slender

When she took as her defender

Thomas, Dennis Vashaw's son?

"Old Time turned the hour glass over,

Lightly smoothed his beard of snow,

"Gazed upon his time-worn sledge

And spoke thus with accents low:

"Three and twenty years I've counted

Since their first bright wedding day

When this couple young and bashful

Started forth on life's highway;

Both were slim and slight of stature—

Look and see what Time has done,

We have here a portly couple

But 'tis "Sadie" and Vashaw's son.

"I have watched as years sped onward,

Watched them walking swift or slow,

And they still keep step together

In days of long ago;

Now their near a "Silver Wedding"

All too soon will come their "Gold"

May they celebrate their "Diamond"

As they gracefully grow old.

"And so far I've touched them lightly

With the marks of my sure sight,

Or I hate to trace deep wrinkles

On their faces brave and bright;

And all through the years before them

Inter storms and Summers shine

May their vows be "love and cherish"

As faithful as "Old Time."

"Now cease quizzing! In the hour glass

See the sands are running low,

Behold I've chatted that wedding

Three and twenty years ago;

Set before have I been idle—

'Tis time down he tips the glass

And again the sands so countless

Mark the hours as swift they pass.

"Then "Time," silent, took his sledge

And with firm step strode away

Left me musing in the moonlight

Of that long past wedding day,

Wishing they might be as happy,

Always just as full of fun

As when in that gladsummer

They were joined so firm as one.

And I, too, hope that together

They may journey on life's way;

And in years and years from this one

Keep their "Diamond" wedding day.

Mr. and Mrs. Vashaw received many gifts, furniture, china, cut glass, also unabridged linen, pieces of silver, also refreshments of ice cream and cake were served and the guests departed at a late hour with hearty wishes for many happy returns of August 6th.

SCHOOL NOTES

The schools of the Bethel Greenwood, tricked Mason District will commence the fall term on Tuesday, Sept. 7, except the Irish, Bryant and Patch Mountain schools which will begin Aug. 23.

A meeting of the teachers of the district will be held in the grammar room at Bethel, Monday, Sept. 6, at 2.30 P. M.

In the town of Bethel we have one piece of road or rather one bridge which is a menace to automobile drivers or infact to the travelling public. The bridge in question is on the road to Locke's

Mills across Alder River.

Automobiles on going towards Locke's

Mills should drive slowly and in turning out to pass another car should not turn too far as there is a steep embankment and no guard rail is there to warn you how far to go. The least that the town of Bethel could do in this matter would be to put up a guard rail.

HOWE-RICHARDSON

On Saturday evening, Aug. 7, Mr. Winfield S. Wight and Miss Blanche Richardson were united in marriage at Lewiston by Rev. Jasley Bean.

Mr. Howe is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Howe. He was a student at Gould's Academy when the United States entered the war and he left school to join Company D of Norway. He went across in the 20th Division and remained until the fall of 1919 when he received his discharge. He has been employed in Bethel since then.

Mrs. Howe is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Richardson and is a graduate of Gould's Academy in the class of 1911. She has been a very successful school teacher for the past few years. Bethel friends extend hearty congratulations and best wishes to them for a happy and prosperous journey through life.

POTATO MOSAIC

Progress Being Made in the Study of This Disease

For some years the pathologists of the Maine Agricultural Experiment Station have been giving some attention to the study of potato mosaic, first independently and later as a joint or cooperative project with the Office of Cotton, Truck and Porage Crop Disease Investigations of the Bureau of Plant Industry. Very gratifying progress has been made during the last two years and it seemed desirable to prepare a bulletin on this subject in order that Maine potato growers might have the benefit of any information that the Station has. The manuscript for this bulletin is now in the hands of the printer, but in the ordinary course of events this means a delay of two, three or even more months before the publication is ready for distribution. Therefore a copy of the summary and certain recommendations for the control of potato mosaic are given at this time.

SUMMARY.

Potato mosaic has been known in Europe for many years and Maine since 1912. At present it is well established in this State. It is also well distributed over the United States.

The mosaic of tobacco, a plant related to the potato, has been thoroughly studied and apparently is quite similar to potato mosaic. However, there are important differences between the two maladies.

Potato mosaic has certain marked effects upon the appearance, physiology, and yield of potatoes.

It is transmitted by the tubers of infected plants, whether or not these plants have had time to show the usual symptoms before death. This transmission is not modified by seed treatment.

Its infectiousness has been proved by means of grafting and of inoculations with juice from diseased plants.

Aphids, or plant lice, have been shown to be important agents for natural transmission of mosaic from one potato plant to another.

Transmission has been attempted by means of flea beetles, Colorado potato beetle or "potato bugs", and cuttings of leaves, and contact of seed pieces, leaves, stems, and roots, but has not yet been demonstrated with any of these agents.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for full testimonials.

The spread of potato mosaic to healthy plants apparently cannot be avoided by the selection of hills or tubers or by discarding parts of the seed tubers, unless plant lice are controlled.

The relation between this spread and differences between localities, varieties, fertilizers, and spray methods are being studied but have not been fully determined.

Such spread has been reduced by roguing seed plots, that is, by removing mosaic hills as they appear, and absolutely prevented by thorough control of certain kinds of insects.

Potato mosaic is difficult to control but it is now possible to recommend measures that promise to be helpful.

Recommendations for the Control of Potato Mosaic

Do not expect to control or reduce potato mosaic by means of sprays, seed treatment, or soil treatment, except by spraying methods which control plant lice. Use as healthy stock as can be obtained. Plant at least part of it in a seed plot of sufficient size to furnish seed for next year's planting. Select land for this purpose as remote from all other potato fields as possible and land which has not grown potatoes for one or more years. Give the seed plot special care. Rogue all mosaic plants from the seed plot as soon as they show the disease. In case aphids are unusually abundant, the spreading of mosaic by them possibly would be reduced by controlling them with suitable spraying methods, which are advised for the seed plot every year inasmuch as even a small and inconspicuous number of aphids may spread mosaic. Such spraying methods, according to recent publications upon this question, require adding 3-4 pint of "Black Leaf 40" or of a similar nicotine preparation to each 50 gallons of Bordeaux mixture. In localities where it is feasible to make a separate spray for aphids, the 3-4 pint of nicotine solution is more effective if added to 50 gallons of water containing 2 pounds of laundry soap first dissolved in hot water. Moreover, if preferred, kerosene emulsion may be used instead of the nicotine spray. Regardless of whatever spray is used for plant lice, it is essential that it be applied in such a manner that it reaches the insects themselves, since the effectiveness of the spray depends upon contact. Hence it is necessary to have the nozzles arranged on the spray boom so as to spray the under sides of the leaves and the stalks of the plants, as well as the upper surfaces, with the spray materials. Avoid any chance of mixing the seed

DR. COOMBS NAMED NEW HEAD OF DIVISION OF VENEREAL DISEASE

Dr. George Holden Coombs of Waldoboro, prominent in Maine medical circles as former president of the Maine Medical Association and of the Knox County Medical Association, has been appointed director of the Division of Venereal Disease of the Maine State Department of Health, to succeed Dr. H. E. Hitchcock, recently resigned.

Dr. Coombs is at present the health officer of Waldoboro and for years has been keenly interested in matters pertaining to public health, particularly as to communicable diseases on which subject he is a recognized authority. He has conducted a successful practice in Waldoboro for the past thirty years, before which he practiced his profession in Brunswick, and in Toledo, Ohio. He comes to his new position, with the confidence of the doctors and public health workers throughout the state and his appointment is thought by Dr. L. D. Bristol, the commissioner, to be particularly fortunate for the efficient continuance of the venereal disease campaign in this state.

Dr. Coombs was born in Brunswick, January 7, 1863, and was educated in the public schools there. His medical training and degree were obtained at the Medical Department of the University of the City of New York, from which he graduated in 1888. Following the completion of his training, he served as interne at Bellevue Hospital in New York for two years, and in 1890 began the active practice of his profession. He has been president of the Knox County Medical Association and has just retired from the presidency of the Maine Medical Association. During the war, Dr. Coombs was active in every form of war work which came within his field.

The Division of Venereal Disease of which he is appointed director is maintained jointly by the State Department of Health and the United States Public Health Service and has been in existence here in Maine about two years, during which time Dr. H. E. Hitchcock has been director. An assistant director, Miss Myra V. Parker, R. N. and a clerical force completes the present personnel of the division. Dr. Coombs will join the Division on September 1.

For Preparing and Keeping the Perishable Foods of Midsummer and Foods of Midsummer

Midsummer illnesses are often charged to excess of fruit and vegetables in the diet. This form of diet is the best for this season of the year but unless foods are not in perfect condition of ripeness and cleanness, trouble is sure to follow, especially if we ourselves are not in good physical condition.

The high temperature and moisture usually present in August afford just the condition under which bacteria grow. We need, therefore, to be very careful how and what we eat.

Most houses are now screened against flies but harmful germs also are carried in dust. All food should therefore be protected from dust as from flies.

While food is cooling, uncovered or standing exposed to the air, spores or germs of molds and ferments enter and the warmth present causes their rapid multiplication. Food should, therefore, be cooled as quickly as possible and never left standing in a hot kitchen or unprotected anywhere. It is wise to put soup or stewed fruit into two dishes instead of one that they may more rapidly cool and be put away.

Do not trust too much to the refrigerator to keep foods in good condition. If trouble-making germs have settled on meat, dessert, milk or butter before they reach the cooler, their multiplication may be delayed but the temperature of the ice box, being below freezing, is not such as to render them harmless and if through lack of ice, it warms up, a dangerous change in the foods is easily brought about.

Few foods should stand over twenty-four hours without sealing to kill germs that may be present. Meat with gravy, reheated in a pie crust, or a salad or meat loaf can become so germ-infested as to cause severe illness. The housemother may succumb first to the poison created by the germs, because she has worked hard and eaten carelessly. It is well for her to try to keep cool in mind and body during the busy, trying days of August.

Why spend hours in a hot kitchen making cakes, pies and fancy desserts when fresh fruit is more abundant than at any other time of the year? Try to plan to have as few hot dishes as possible and yet have something warm at each meal. Plan all three meals at once and "dovetail" them to save handling the same materials and utensils twice a day.

The ice cream freezer and gelatine should be ever present summer helps. Those who have abundant milk and their own supply of ice will find it much simpler to freeze a fruit ice or ice cream on the back porch—and a gallon may be handled almost as easily as a pint—than to make pies in a hot kitchen.

Where ice is not available, gelatine may be used to give form not only to desserts but to meat loaves or salads. The knuckle or end of the leg of veal may be made into an attractive dish, or hot weather by the aid of gelatine, instead of serving it as a stew, which is more appetizing for a cool day.

Lamb can be used in the same way. To prepare a delicious jellied loaf, trim and wash the meat and barely cover with cold water, add a few whole cloves, an onion, parsley or dried celery leaves, and one teaspoonful of salt for each quart of water. Cook gently for two hours or until the bones may be tapped out. Drain the broth from the meat and let it cook again, uncovered, until reduced to less than the bulk of the meat. Dissolve some soaked gelatine in the broth and more seasoning as needed, a little lemon juice or vinegar or a cucumber pickle chopped fine. Have the meat carefully picked over, all skin and bones removed. It may be left in large pieces or be chopped. Arrange in a good mold or loaf pan or a bowl and strain the broth over it. Leave overnight to cool. Or it may be shaped in small cups, one mold to be served to each person on a lettuce leaf or nest of water cross. Almost any meat or fish or fowl may be prepared in the same way.

Layered, chopped and mixed with a little chopped ham, makes a good change. Canned salmon mixed with a cooked salad dressing in which a little gelatine has been dissolved, is excellent. This is a fine way to put in attractive shape the last bits of a roast of meat or of a boiled ham, instead of using them for hash or a hot meat loaf.

Sometimes when we make a meat loaf and steam it there is considerable liquid in the pan when it is done and the solid portion has drawn away from the pan. This liquid may be used to dissolve a small amount of soaked gelatine and then be poured over the meat again, thus surrounding it with jelly when it is cold. When meat broth is lacking as a foundation for the jelly, strained tomato may be used, or celery or even cucumber may be cooked and strained and seasoned.

TELLS ON THE KIDNEYS

Bethel People Have Found This To Be True.

The strain of overwork tells on weakened kidneys. The hurry and worry of business men, the heavy lifting and stooping of workmen, the women's household cares, tend to wear, weaken and injure the kidneys until they can no longer filter the poison from the blood and the whole body suffers from the waste matter that accumulates. Weakened kidneys need quick assistance. Donnan's Kidney Pills are prepared especially for weakened kidneys; tired, worn-out backs—have proven their merit in thousands of such cases. Convincing proof of their worth in a Bethel citizen's statement.

S. J. Morse, retired farmer, Mechanic St., Bethel, says: "I had been suffering off and on from a dull, heavy ache across my kidneys. This trouble came on when I did very much work and I finally got so I couldn't do anything. I used Donnan's Kidney Pills and I couldn't wish for anything better for they gave me almost instant relief from the headache. I keep Donnan's on hand now, getting them at Bossman's Drug Store and they always help me."

Price 60 cents, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Donnan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Morse had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

BUBONIC PLAGUE

Since its Outbreak in United States, Health Workers Urge Campaign Against Rats

The recent discovery of bubonic plague in the United States is responsible for the active campaign against the rat which is being started in every community by health authorities, who are well aware that this is known to be a disease particularly of rodents and of the rat above all others.

Dr. D. Bristol, Commissioner of Health in Maine, is working with Surgeon-General Hugh S. Cummings of the Federal Public Health Service, in spreading information of the nature and source of bubonic plague and instructing the public to the necessity of rat extermination and rat proofing.

In this connection, the surgeon general says:

"Bubonic plague is primarily a disease of rodents, especially rats, and the disease can be controlled effectively by measures directed against the rat. The extermination of rats is all the more to be desired because of the tremendous economic damage they cause."

According to conservative estimates made on the basis of numerous surveys, there is at least one rat for every person in the United States. This estimate coincides with that for Great Britain and Ireland, and with authoritative figures for Denmark, France and Germany.

The annual up-keep per rodent was computed by the same authorities as $1.50 in Great Britain, $1.20 in Denmark, and $1.00 in France. The depredations of the rats in the United States will very probably exceed the estimate for Great Britain. One-half a cent a day is considered conservative, but even on this computation, it costs the United States $180,000,000 a year to support its rat population. This does not include mice.

"The U. S. Public Health Service is prepared to detail trained experts to assist communities in organizing the fight against rats," says General Cummings. "Many of our officers have had extensive practical experience in this work, and know how to make it really effective. In the report cities the work of extermination should be supplemented by bacteriological laboratory examinations to determine whether or not plague infection is present among the rodents. In the inland cities this is not now necessary."

KINDS OF TEMPER

By JULIA A. ROBINSON.

(© 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Yes, there are two kinds of temper, John, I can vouch for that," asserted Nathan, with a wink at his friend.

"Humph," sneered John. "Guess it's all one kind of temper with the women. Girls have sweet temper, mebbe, when they're looking out for a husband, before they get hitched. After a woman's been married a bit there ain't much of the sweet kind left; it's all the other sort."

"Don't know about that—don't quite agree with you," objected Nathan.

"Prove it," challenged John.

"Give up if I do?" insisted Nathan.

"Go ahead and prove it," was John's incredulous answer.

Nathan sat back in his chair and squared his shoulders.

"My wife's a good cook," he began.

"I don't say it because she's my wife; others say it, too. She's especially famous for her preserves. All the neighbors are crazy to have some of her preserves and are willing to pay for them well. In preserving time she works herself nearly to death, but she doesn't sell it all, not by a jugful; I can tell you. Well, one October Sarah had been working enough to kill, preserving, standing over the hot stove till near midnight some days. I knew she was getting tired from the little flush on her cheek and the wearisome look about her eyes, and I tried to make her give it up."

"You've got lots more'n you can make use of now," I told her. 'What's the use of keeping at it? Just take a rest.'"

"But they're ordered," she explained. "I want to sell enough this year to buy Nina that white muslin she wants."

"Where am I going to put them all?" she asked. "There isn't room for any more in the small fruit closet; that's half full already."

"Tell you what I'll do," I said, for I felt good-natured just then. "I'll put up a hanging shelf for you; then they'll be all together, and be out of the way."

"That'll be fine!" she beamed. "Be sure and make it strong; they're heavy!"

"I laughed at her for that reminder. 'Hain't I been carpentering more or less all my life, and didn't I know how to make it hold?'"

"Well, I put up the shelf—two of them there were, one above the other, and we arranged the preserves on them—a tempting row!"

"One night Sarah said, just before we went to bed: 'Mrs. Jones is coming for her share of the preserves tomorrow. I declare I kinder hate to see them go, but I'll be glad of the money. I shall go right down and buy that dress for Nina. I haven't told her about it, and she'll be tickled to death.'"

"We were sleeping soundly that night. About two o'clock there came a crash that fairly shook the house. Even the neighbors in the next block heard it, and told us afterward they thought it was an earthquake."

"I was so dazed at first I couldn't think; but my wife sat right up in bed."

"Nathan," she gasped; 'my preserves!' That was all, but her voice had a hollow sound."

"I sprang up, beginning to pull on my boots, but Sarah pulled me back."

"No, Nathan, we won't go down," she said, quite calmly. "It's done, and we can't help it now. There's no use trying to save anything; the glass is in it by this time. We can't clean up tonight. Wait till morning."

"Even in my nervous condition I couldn't help wondering to hear her speak so calm."

"Well, if you believe me, my wife waited till we'd finished breakfast before she'd go down into that cellar. 'There won't be time for breakfast after we've cleaned up,' she said, 'better eat now.'"

"We went down cellar kinder gingerly, never speaking a word, and what a sight met our eyes—broken glass, splinters of wood and rope, floating in the sticky sweet stuff that had looked so beautiful only a few hours before. We just stared for a full minute before either spoke. Then I uttered an oath."

"My wife had never heard me swear before and I could see her shudder and a look of amazement creep into her eyes. Then she spoke, and I declared what she said nearly knocked me over."

"Oh, Nat," she exclaimed, the smiles actually creeping into her face, "here are some whole jars! Would you believe it possible?"

"She began counting—'one, two, three, four—five—six—seven—this something to be thankful for? It isn't all lost, after all, and perhaps we can save some of the cracked ones.'"

"Did she scold me and tell me it was all my fault? I knew it was. No, sir, she didn't! It made me feel mean to hear her talk so cheerful—and that is all she ever said about it! I've been trying to make it up to her all these years—not the money part; we could stand that—but having her so sweet about it—I just felt I must be sweet, too. Give up, John?" he asked, turning suddenly to his friend.

"Humph!" grinned John sheepishly. "There are always exceptions to every rule."

Nathan laughed heartily, realizing he had won.

TRIBUTE TO 'EX-SERVICE' MEN

National Commander D'Olier, in Letter for Memorial Service, Commends Men Who Served.

Listen, buddies, to what Franklin D'Olier, your national commander, said about you in a recent letter. A Legion post at Westville, N. J., asked Rev. Howard E. Thompson of Woodbury, N. J., to conduct a Memorial service for them, and the minister wrote the national commander for a message which he could read publicly on that occasion.

"In a very few years," Mr. D'Olier wrote, in part, "the ex-service men of this country will be the most prominent in business, in the professions and in politics, not merely because they are ex-service men, but because, in order to enter the service, they were picked men, physically, mentally and morally, and being thus selected and having the advantage of great experience in the army, navy and marine corps, they will necessarily be leaders in all walks of life.

"The American Legion proposes to keep the ex-service men together in an organization whose ideals are service to our country and service to our comrades, and their reward will be the continuing satisfaction of unselfish service faithfully performed."

FURLOUGH AT ATLANTIC CITY

Famous Resort Post Arranges to Accommodate Former Service Men on Their Vacations.

The Atlantic City post of the American Legion is looking up the A. E. F. leave area idea to the possibilities of America's summer resort. It is inviting Legionnaires from any part of the United States to spend a furlough at Atlantic City, and it is establishing for them a tent camp at which the expense item of quarters is reduced to a minimum. So, even though our well-known former skipper, Uncle Sam, isn't available to issue transportation and commutation of railroads and quarters, any Legionnaire may now spend a vacation at Atlantic City without going financially flat in the process.

Bill Fisher, formerly top sergeant of Company C, Twenty-third engineers, is the father of the Atlantic City leave area plan. He put the scheme up to the Atlantic City post and the post voted to carry it out. A committee was authorized to go ahead with the scheme.

The conception of the camp which the committee had in mind when it started work was a tent town which should be operated on the simplest plan feasible. It should provide for a nominal sum living quarters under canvas, thus saving the Legionnaires the expensive hotel bills and at the same time assuring them of a place to stay in a city in which it is sometimes difficult to obtain hotel accommodations at any price. Living in the tent town, the ex-service men should be able to take advantage of the bathing, the boating, the dancing on the pier, the shows in the theaters and the many other diversions which the resort offers.

The committee has named the tent town Camp D'Olier in honor of the Legion's national commander. It has worked out all the details of the camp. The city councilmen, led by the mayor, granted the post the right to use a plot of ground owned by the city and the city engineer laid out the camp streets and planned the sanitary facilities.

All the Boys Know Him.

What do you know about pediculosis? The bug experts in the bureau of entomology of the department of agriculture are seeking information about this five-syllabled affliction, which the A. E. F. veteran knows by the shorter term of "crotches." A report of the bureau says that if lice-borne diseases should get a foothold in this country their appearance in epidemic form is not impossible.

Had the Goods on Him.

"What's the charge against this man?" asked the judge.

"Fighting in the street," replied the officer.

"You're fined $9.00, my man."

"What is the $9 cents for, your honor?"

"War tax."

"But, your honor, the war's over."

"Over nothing? you were fighting weren't you?"

SELF-RELIANCE

By George Wilson Jennings

Although our loyal friends add greatly to the cheerfulness and usefulness of our lives and give real value thereto, we must in the main depend upon ourselves for every possible thing because each and every one is his own best friend or enemy.

Talking recently to one of our renowned song-writers, he said: "That in his early life he depended implicitly upon relatives and friends for assistance. After a time they became averse to helping him. Sickness overtaking him and being confined to a hospital for sometime and finding himself bereft of funds, at this juncture the authorities told him that he was to be sent to a charity hospital for treatment. He begged to remain for a month longer, to which they consented, and during that time he was determined to exercise self-reliance and to change his course in life. Having a talent for music he decided to write a song for the vaudeville stage, which was a marked success, it being used by one of the leading singers, after which he became famous."

It is seldom that we find out how great our resources are until we are thrown upon them. If there be a faith, that can "remove mountains" it is the faith in one's own power and very often we find in our experience that help from without is often effecting in its effects, but help from within, the energy and perseverance of the man himself, is invariably invigorating, stimulating and at all times effectual. Life might be compared to a game of cards; we may expect nothing from the way the cards are dealt for we have to play the cards, whatever they may be, to the best of our skill and the ability we possess.

Whatever your sex or position, life is a battle in which you are compelled to show your pluck and patience combined with perseverance. The writer has found in his many years of experience that opposition is what mankind needs and cannot have too much of; this is one's experience, for this is what we want and must have to be good for anything. Hardships are also the nature of self-reliance.

Despair and prostration mean cowardice and defeat; men are born to succeed, not to fail. Always bear in mind one thought and that is, let no one discourage self-reliance—it is of all of them the greatest quality one could possess and is the maker of true manliness.

POEMS WORTH READING

A SWEETHEART IN PRISON
The judge was there, the jury, too, and people from afar;
A fair young lad of tender years was prisoner at the bar.
The great courtroom was crowded with an eager, anxious throng,
And many a heart was aching for the boy accused of wrong.

A maiden fair with golden hair pushed swiftly through the crowd,
The people gazed in wonder, they spoke
no words aloud;
Then stepping to the judge's seat one moment she did pause,
And smiling through her tears, she said,
"Judge, let me plead his cause."

She passed then to the jury-box to make her earnest plea;
"This prisoner, sir, is innocent; I know you'll set him free.
Next Sunday is our wedding-day, the dream of woman's life,
When he before the altar will make me his loving wife.

"Unless you wish to blight our lives don't say that we must part.
Remember, judge, your darling wife was once your sweetheart.
Just let your mind go wandering back to days that have gone by,
And see your sweetheart and yourself
just like this boy and I.

"We love each other with a love that's just as strong and pure;
And he's not guilty of the charge, of that you may be sure.
If you have children of your own, be merciful, I pray;
Remember, judge, you break my heart
if you send him away."

The judge rose slowly to his feet, the court was still as death,
The tears were trickling down his cheek, he spoke with bated breath:
"I have a little girl at home with just such baby eyes,"

And the seeds of mercy sown there will flourish to the skies.

PREACHING VS. PRACTICE
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox
It is easy to sit in the sunshine
And talk to the man in the shade;
It is easy to float in a well-trimmed boat
And point out the places to wade.

But once we pass into the shadows
And murmur and fret and frown,
And our length from the bank we shout
for a plank,
Or throw up our hands and go down.

It is easy to sit in your carriage
And counsel the man on foot,
Not get down and walk, and you'll change your talk
As you feel the peg in your boot.

It is easy to tell the teller
How best he can carry his park,
But no one can rate a burden's weight
Until it has been on his back.

The upturned mouth of pleasure
Can praise of sorrow's worth,
But give it a sip, and a wry lip
Was never made on earth.

ANDOVER
I little troubled Thistle Head
Held above your sunlit state,
Then far boys to be in bed
When the clock says half past eight
Lay your heads on beds again
Till the night brings rest, and then
When there comes another day
You can take them up again.

What is that? So much to do?
All your home work "wax behind!"
Star a little sleep like you
Answers are so hard to find!
Hard to find! Indeed they are!
And, as out through life you go,
Though you travel very far,
You will always find them so.

All the worry, all the strain
When the evening lamps are lit,
Though one looks with night and pain
Will not help him out a bit
Only work and sleep and play
Taken turn and round about
As one journey on his way
Helps to guide him out.

We, who fancy we are wise
But are children, just like you
Study still, with guided eyes
Problems we are set to do
Through a life of frenzied toil
Filled with worry and fret.

THE END OF THE ROAD
By Emily Granger
There comes a time in the lives of us all
When our burdens and cares seem a load,
When life seems hard, and we think with a sigh
We have come to the end of the road;
When sorrow lurks in the shade of the years,
There's no glimmer of light from above,
Then, lo! we find in our darkest despair
That there always is friendship and love.

Love is the flower that brightens our lives,
Cheers the heart when life's cares hardest seem;
Love is the milestone that guides us
above,
Makes each hardship and care seem a dream;
Love leads us on as the years swiftly
pass,
Takes the weight and the pain from life's load,
And, lo! we find there is nothing to fear
When we come to the end of the road.

THE SUNNY SIDE OF LIFE
Over there the ache and care, trouble and the strife,
Let us clasp our hands and go the sunny side of life.
Over there the wintry blast,
Sleet and wind and chill;
But the violets of the world
Bloom in love's land still.

Half the shadows, half the woes, half
the thorns we meet,
Part like mist when we go the sunny side of life.
Naught to hinder if we do,
So, away with gloom,
Over there the skies of blue
And the lanes of bloom.

HOME STUDIES IN FINANCE
While the price of so-called "necessities" have appreciably increased, all the official statements on finance given out at Washington show that mortgage security prices have gone down to such a point that the investment opportunities were never better than now. Good securities bearing high rates of interest are apparently interesting people all over the country, and the era of "spending" is giving way to a period of "saving." The old time advice to people to invest in their local public service institutions seems to be proving interesting to many people, and the "home ownership" policy of owning the enterprises that serve the public is taking root.
